

Hillel Lodge pursues new opportunity for government funding

By Paula Smith

The Ontario government has recently announced that it will provide additional dollars for the construction of beds for long-term care in the province. This shift in funding for long-term care has presented an immediate opportunity for the Ottawa Jewish community to go ahead with its plans for the new 100 bed Hillel Lodge at the campus site on Broadview Avenue.

"With a little help from our friends, we will be able to proceed with construction of this new facility, for which there is a pressing need," explained Stephen Schneiderman, executive director of Hillel Lodge. "But the provincial grants cover less than 50 per cent of the capital cost of the building and do not include anything extra for maintaining a kosher facility that meets the needs of our elderly," he added.

He described the plans for the new "state of the art" long-term care centre. "The needs of the elderly for privacy are not adequately being met, with only 15 private rooms at the Wurtemberg site," said Schneiderman. The new facility will include mostly private rooms for its residents. It will be divided into wings with services and therapies provided to the residents within their sections, as much as possible.

Moreover, because of its location at the campus on Broadview, the new Hillel Lodge will be linked to the Soloway JCC and other buildings and so will be able to take advantage of programming and other community activities which happen there. "The location will allow our elderly to be included as part of our community," said Schneiderman. There will also be opportunities to share volunteers because of the proximity to the other community facilities. As an example, Bar Mitzvah and Bat Mitzvah students will be close by and so will be able to join in services at the Hillel Lodge chapel.

The plans for the new facility are specifically geared to the elderly who have multiple health concerns and require support to carry on the activities of their daily lives. The building will include specially designed and separated facilities to care for those with dementia as well as those whose health is declining. Schneiderman says that he hopes to offer a program that is flexible enough, including medical services and counseling, to also provide short-term palliative care in a Jewish context. This would, of necessity, be dependent on provincial government support and approval.

Mitchell Bellman, executive director of the Vaad Ha'Ir, said: "If we can demonstrate to the Ontario government that we are ready to proceed, that the money from the community has been raised, that the architectural drawings are done and that we can begin construction next spring, then we have a better chance of getting the go ahead from the provincial Ministry of Health."

The proposal deadline is July. The community desperately needs and wants to provide a level of care and accommodation for its seniors that will allow them to live with the dignity and quality of life that they deserve.

Let's get this show on the road!

COMMENTARY

"Rainbows in the clouds" is inspiring message

VAAD REPORT

BARBARA FARBER
PRESIDENT, VAOA HA'IR

On five evenings throughout this year, I put community business aside and with good friends attended a wonderful series at the National Arts Centre entitled "Unique Lives". Each speaker, in her own way, was very special and very unique. Like most in the audience, however, I was especially moved by the final speaker, Dr. Maya Angelou, respected by millions as a source of inspiration, strength and encouragement. I thought I would share with you some of her thoughts especially as I thought about them with respect to our community.

The underlying theme of her presentation was of "rainbows in the clouds". It's so easy to be discouraged by negativity. Who would you rather spend time with - the person who sees the glass half full or half empty? Our rainbows in the clouds are our hope and the promise of better things to come in the future. Our parents and grandparents who arrived with dreams of a better life, our past leaders who had a vision of a better future, were our rainbows in the clouds. Dr. Angelou reminded us that it is important to honor the presence or the memory of those who came before us. In so doing, our children will learn this valued tradition and we and, in turn, they, will be future rainbows in the clouds.

We honor many people at the Annual Meetings and through various tributes throughout the year. Many in our community have "unique lives" and have, in fact, helped to make our life in Ottawa more special. To all those being honored, we wish you a hearty Yasher Koach and Mazal Tov. And remember, each of us has the potential to be a "unique life".

Maya Angelou also taught one other important lesson:

"When you learn, teach.
And when you get, give."

I found her words most inspiring.

Yasher Koach to our Walkathon co-chairs, Greg Sanders and Jeff Kofsky, and everyone who volunteered their time for this great UJA event. It was wonderful to know so many families participated in a fun-filled day while at the same time raising funds for UJA. It's a unique occasion for parents "to teach" their children by their example and "to give" to the community.

Linda Nadolny-Cogan, Mitchell Bellman and I attended the National Board meetings in Toronto recently. A decision was made a number of months ago to combine United Israel Appeal and the Council of Jewish Federation into one entity. The new organization is called UIA Federations Canada and the hope is for greater efficiencies and a desire to work as one towards a common shared goal.

The two-day event offered a coming-together of volunteer and professional leadership from across Canada. Problems and possible solutions were shared with one another and I believe that we all came away better from the experience.

Best wishes are extended to all for a happy, healthy and safe summer.

Idea vs Ideal

Which word is your motto?

The English language contains many words that look similar, however, a single letter can dramatically change its meaning. Certain letter variations create a subtle difference that have profound ramifications. There are people of ideas and people of ideals. While the two words appear similar, both in letter and meaning, their difference reflects two very significant attitudes.

Moshe Rabeinu (Moses), the paradigm of Jewish leadership, was a well-spring of ideas and concepts. He taught the Torah to the Jewish people. His greatness, however, was the idealism that he personified. He was never one to be swayed by the disposition or hysterics of the masses.

Achievement in life is not marked by one's ideas per se, rather the ideals that one practises and perseverance to their implementation. Ideas have ignited the spirit of many, yet they do not reflect the goodness or quality of character of an individual.

All too often ideas can be merely vague notions; when faced with reality they become flawed and non-implementable. Ideals, on the other hand, are the transfer of abstract values into practice, a practice that can make one's life a more meaningful one.

Lay people often have a plethora of ideas, some outstanding in both scope and vision. Yet only a small minority is willing to invest the time and energy needed to translate good ideas into reality.

FROM THE PULPIT

RABBI MORDECAI BERGER
YOUNG ISRAEL

That combination of energy, time and devotion reflects a person of ideals willing to invest in their self-realization. This is the genius of the Jewish people - the ability to transform noble and G-dly ideas into an idealism of life.

One can profess the joys of Jewish ideas, the culture of the holidays, the benefit of tradition, the necessity of continuity, yet only idealists translate the idea of Jewish life into the reality of Jewish life. Each one of us can choose to be either an idea person or a person of ideals.

The Tzemach Tzedeh (3rd Lubavitcher Rebbe 1789-1866) once told his son, "Helping someone in his livelihood, even to earn just 70 kopeks (a small, low-value Russian coin) opens all the gates of Heaven. To help another whole-heartedly, with sensitivity and taking pleasure in doing a kindness to another is the loftiest ideal."

Good ideas are not enough! Living ideals makes the world a better place for all.

On Site at the Centre

Your guided tour of the Hyman and Ruth Soloway Jewish Community Centre in the Joseph and Rose Ages Building

Introducing ... The Art Studio, the Library, the Archives and the Israel Experience Centre

The Soloway Jewish Community Centre will be a centre of Jewish learning, arts, and culture. Join us for a tour of the Art Studio, the Library, the Archives and the Israel Experience Centre, which will come alive this September with activities celebrating the many ways in which we can experience our Jewish heritage.

From the Lobby, take the steps to the lower level and turn left. The Art Studio is a large, multi-purpose space, divided by a glass wall into a Loom Room and an Arts and Crafts area, with a separate kiln room in a corner. A wall of cupboards, counters and sinks provides storage and cleanup space. Large windows bathe the area in sunlight.

The Loom Room, with both full-sized and child-sized looms, will be a major component of the JCC's visual arts programming. In this room, our community will be encouraged to "weave a new tradition," with a unique line-up of Judaic-themed weaving courses for all ages: tallait, tallit bags, wall hangings and even a family chuppah program.

In the Arts and Crafts area, adults and kids can enjoy a wide variety of classes. New at the Soloway JCC this fall is a ceramics program, featuring hand-building with clay and ceramic painting. The focus of these courses will be the creation of Jewish-themed artifacts - seder plates, chanukiot, kiddush cups.

In the Soloway JCC's Art Studio, you can explore your Jewish heritage "hands-on".

Now let's head one floor up to the Library and Archives where you can explore your Jewish heritage in a more traditional way.

The Library is truly a magnificent setting for Jewish learning. An enormous circular window in the design of a Magen David is a fitting symbol of the Library's purpose - to involve you in the circle of Jewish learning.

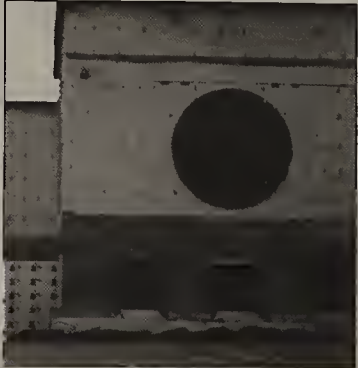

Wooden shelving, comfortable seating, and handsome furniture create an atmosphere which invites you to linger.

A new children's section is equipped with child-sized tables, chairs and shelving - the perfect spot for storytelling and other programming.

Computer terminals hooked up to the Net, a collection of Judaic software and CD-ROMs, and a Jewish video collection are other new features of the Library.

The Library, however, will be much more than a handsome room filled with books and the latest equipment. It hopes to be a centre for active Jewish learning - offering lectures, workshops, book reviews, film series, children's programming, and more.

Adjacent to the Library are the Archives. In their new location, the Archives staff will, finally, have the space and the modern technology to preserve our local Jewish history for future generations. The Archives area includes staff workrooms and the Vault.

The Library

Staff will find the material you need in the Vault and deliver it to you at the six research carrels in the Library. Four of these carrels are equipped with computer terminals which will, in the future, allow you to access archival material on your monitor. The Library and the Archives also share two audio-visual stations which can be used to view or listen to tapes.

Although the Archives are off limits to the public, we have special permission to take you on a brief guided tour of the area. Our first stop is the Workroom, located behind the Library's control desk. Here archival material is cleaned and conserved, photographs are stored, and exhibits are prepared. It includes a scanning station, which will enable staff eventually to put all material on CD-ROM, so that everything in the Archives can be accessed through its computer system. This long-range project will begin with the Ottawa Jewish Bulletin.

The Catalogue Room is where all papers and material are catalogued before being placed in the Vault. Near this room are lockable cabinets in which researchers can temporarily store archival material they are working on.

Now let's enter the Vault itself, the repository of our community's history. In this room are stored records from our various organizations, collections, and everything except photographs. Equipped with banks of moveable, stacking shelving, it is humidity and temperature controlled and fire-proof.

Our final stop in our tour of the Soloway JCC is the Israel Experience Centre, located just outside the Library. This is the place to go to for information about any short or long-term program in Israel. In this room, staff will also plan a variety of programs, from lectures to community events, linking our community spiritually to Israel.

The Soloway Jewish Community Centre will open its doors September 8, 1998 to the community. To book your actual "on site" tour, please call Miriam Sobel at 789-1818.

The end of an era

Last Annual Meeting held at 151 Chapel Street

It was an occasion to talk about building bridges - from one generation to another, between the Vaad and its beneficiary and affiliated organizations and, most significantly, from 151 Chapel Street to Broadview Avenue.

Participants at the 64th Annual General Meeting of the Vaad Ha'Ir held Wednesday, June 10, had the opportunity to honor three exemplary volunteers, attend the last annual meeting held in the auditorium of 151 Chapel Street and rejoice in the community's many accomplishments this past year, which will culminate in the move to the new Joseph and Rose Ages Building.

Vaad President Barbara Farber, who also chaired the evening, remarked that if she were to attach a theme to her term it would be one of building.

"The obvious concrete example is taking place on the Broadview Campus," she said.

"We have also tried to build better relationships within the Vaad family. Building better volunteer and professional relationships has been a personal goal," she added.

Farber reminded the audience that, on assuming her position one year ago, she had vowed to be "an in-your-face president".

She reported that she had tried to do that by visiting many of the community's schools and agencies. While acknowledging the passion that so many have for their own agencies, she remarked that "there have been wonderful examples of harnessing that passion and combining it with a sense of community spirit". She added that "successful goals can be far more easily obtained when people work together as a team".

In introducing Charles Schachnow, this year's recipient of the Freiman Family Young Leadership Award, Robert Greenberg noted that "the one trait that separates Charles from most people and the one that makes him so deserving of the

Dorothy Nadolny establishes Lion of Judah Endowment

By Marjorie Feldman

For Dorothy Nadolny, giving back to the community that "has always been wonderful to us," has been her guiding light. In keeping with Dorothy's deep commitment to the Ottawa Jewish community and to United Jewish Appeal, she recently established a Lion of Judah Endowment (LOJE). Linda Nadolny-Cogan, incoming chair for the 1999 UJA campaign and Dorothy's niece, made the formal presentation of the special Lion of Judah Endowment pin at the Annual Meeting of the Vaad Ha'Ir on June 10.

Dorothy Nadolny

Or L'Atid - Light Unto the Future - is symbolized by a flame emanating from the gold Lion of Judah pin. It represents the establishment of a permanent fund guaranteeing that a woman's financial commitment of $5,000 or more to the annual UJA campaign will be made every year in perpetuity.

Introduced in 1972 for the Miami Women's Division campaign, the Lion of Judah pin has become an internationally recognized symbol of generosity and commitment. The pin is awarded to women who make annual individual donations of $5,000 or more to the UJA campaign. The Ottawa community is proud to have 26 "Lions" who maintain this commitment. Dorothy, a long time Lion of Judah donor, is the first Ottawa woman to establish a Lion of Judah Endowment. When asked recently about the establishment of her LOJE, she proudly replied, "It's my pleasure - I'm glad that I am able to do this."

Involvement in the Jewish community has become a way of life for this Ottawa native. Fourth child and only daughter of Isadore and Jennie Arron, Dorothy learned from an early age the importance of giving back to the community and of supporting Israeli causes. As a teenager, she was active in Young Judea. After her marriage to Herb Nadolny in 1952, she became active in the Nahalal Chapter of Hadassah-WIZO, serving in many leadership capacities including chapter president. She is still active in the Massada Chapter. In addition, Dorothy has been a member of the National Council of Jewish Women and the Ottawa Chapter of Canadian Friends of Hebrew University, serving as president from 1990 - 1996.

One of the founders of UJA Women's Division in 1972, Dorothy has assumed many leadership roles, including Women's Division Chair 1977-1978. She has successfully co-chaired the Snowbird Division for several years with Ethel Taylor. Dorothy will be co-chairing the 1999 Women's Campaign Lion of Judah Division.

Proud mother of four married children, Ellen, Sharon, Lawrence and Lynda and grandmother to 12, Dorothy Nadolny has exemplified the highest level of Jewish giving and community leadership. By establishing the Lion of Judah Endowment, Dorothy's legacy to her beloved family and community will be realized for generations to come.

Rabbi Susan Grossman discusses solutions to preserve Jewish unity

Rabbi Susan Grossman, identified by the New York Jewish Week as one of 45 Jewish leaders to watch in the next century, spoke at Adath Shalom Congregation's Shabbaton held June 12-13. Speaking on the topic "One People or Many? Diversity and Divisiveness in the Jewish Community", she dispelled the myth one "normative" Judaism ever existed and explored solutions which preserved Jewish unity from various ideological schisms.

Grossman is currently a member of the Law Standards Committee for the Conservative Movement; spiritual leader of Beth Shalom Congregation of Columbia, MD; and is completing her PhD in Ancient Judaism at the Jewish Theological Seminary. As a writer and scholar, she is best known for the anthology, Daughters of the King: Women and the Synagogue.

Interviewed by Ari Goldberg of Adath Shalom Congregation, Grossman responded to the following questions:

Q: "Sinat Hinam", senseless hatred that divides the Jewish people from within, erupted in the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Throughout Jewish history, there have been many schisms. How grave a challenge do we face right now?

A: The Jewish people face a grave challenge to the unity of our people. Such unity is not just an abstract value, but a reality that carries with it concrete political, as well as social, ramifications. Violence is a radical solution resorted to when fringe elements of a society believe they have no other recourse to influence public decisions. Violence undermines the fabric of a society and ultimately undermines the rule of law and justice in that society. Unrestricted, violence will spread, catching more and more individuals and groups within its net. That is one of the terrible lessons we learned from the Holocaust.

As a united people, we have been able to survive any enemy that has risen against us. However, a house divided cannot stand. Rome conquers Israel when civil war erupts between brothers, the Hasmonean sons of Queen Alexandra Salome. Rome razes Jerusalem 100 years later when the followers of two charismatic leaders are so busy killing themselves they do not unite in defence of the city until the army is at Jerusalem's walls. It is important to remember that Jewish independence historically has most been jeopardized when Jew has risen up against Jew.

Q: On a local community level, and as individual members of Clal Yisrael, what can we do to foster Jewish unity?

A: Every segment of the Jewish community has something to offer the totality of what we need to survive and thrive in the 21st century. Our challenge is to be able to articulate honestly and with great humility that no one segment of the Jewish community has the whole truth. Revelation comes to all of us in pieces, because we are merely human. We must learn from each other, through programs that foster mutual respect, and remember to depend upon each other in facing the great challenges ahead, such as assimilation here and in Israel, combating rising anti-Semitism around the world, and redefining Diaspora-Israel relations.

Spice up your life with a taste of Judaism at 13th annual Jewish Women's Education Institute

By Kinneret Globerman

The last time Rabbi Asher Jacobson spoke on the Kabbalah, 400 people showed up when only 100 were expected. And Rabbi Jacobson is only one of the exciting speakers lined up for the 13th annual Jewish Women's Educational Institute taking place at the Jewish Youth Library throughout July. Vaad President Barbara Farber, Rabbi Reuven Bulka and Director of the Volunteer Centre of Ottawa-Carleton Paula Speevak-Sladowski are just a few of the featured guests who will share their expertise on a variety of stimulating topics including Getting Involved: Jewish Women and Volunteering, and Spousal Relations in Judaism: What You Thought You Knew and Want to Know But Were Afraid to Ask.

"True education is something that reaches deep inside a person, empowering us to use the information we absorb to be more productive from within." These words come from the Lubavitcher Rebbe (o.b.m.), and it is this philosophy which drives the Jewish Women's Institute. For four weeks this July, women of all affiliations and backgrounds, can participate in as many as 11 workshops (and a weekend Shabbaton) or as few as one, and all for a nominal fee.

Free tutorials will also be offered as part of the Institute program. Personalized learning sessions will be available every evening at the Jewish Youth Library. Rivka Caytak - a high school student at the Lubavitch girls' high school in Chicago, Illinois - will tutor on any topic of Jewish interest, from how to read Hebrew and the basis of kashrut to analyzing Torah commentaries.

The Institute takes place at the Jewish Youth Library, 192 Switzer Avenue Tuesday and Thursday mornings, from 9:30 to 11:30 am. The Shabbaton - a mystical, spiritual weekend of lectures on the miracle of Jewish existence, the Kabbalistic chain of revelation, and a singles' lecture/brunch on spirituality and marriage - takes place July 24 and 25.

For more information on any of these activities, call the library (729-7712 or 729-1619).

Young Women's Leadership Council's alumni hold reunion

By Pauline E. Pankowski

"I wanted to organize a reunion of the alumni of the Young Women's Leadership Council as soon as I took on the chairmanship of that program" says current chair, Benita Baker. "I feel that all of us share a special bond that is worth maintaining and fostering."

Baker has been involved in the Young Women's Leadership Council (YWLC) for the past four years. The program was created eight years ago by Linda Nadolny-Cogan in order to enrich the participants' knowledge of Jewish issues and the Jewish community and to encourage them to assume leadership positions in the community.

"I meet women all over the city who tell me that they used to be part of Young Women's. When I tell them I am involved now we have an immediate connection," says Baker. "Young Women's Leadership Council has become an Ottawa tradition, where women from diverse walks of life find mutual interests and a common bond."

The reunion, which took place in April, brought together over 60 of the 130 alumni and participants, including five of the seven past chairs. Many who could not attend because of scheduling conflicts are asking for another reunion as soon as possible. Some, like Margo Schwartz, came from as far away as London, England. The theme of the program, "Successful Jewish Women", was very appropriate for the group which includes, in its ranks, successful business and professional women.

Sex therapist, Dr. Peggy Kleinplatz, and former mayor, Jacquelin Holzman, spoke about their career motivations and experiences. Elissa Lief, former YWLC chair, was the program's moderator.

Kleinplatz's presentation showed that this highly trained psychologist, lecturer, and university professor valued her spirituality above all other manifestations of success. She told the audience that Judaism permeates everything she does in her life. As a child of survivors she has always had a very clear understanding of what matters and what is truly important in one's life. "Success is not financial overabundance or position but going to bed at night knowing that you have made your children happy," she says.

In light of her recent trauma, Jacquelin Holzman showed what a unique and courageous individual she is. As the reunion took place before the public announcement of her impending surgery for breast cancer, no one in the audience could have guessed the stress that she must have been under. Her presentation was upbeat, inspiring and motivating. She spoke about her career success which came about because of the deep interest and devotion that she has for her community, for her fellow Ottawans, and for people with special needs.

Both women stressed the importance of family support and balancing their professional and family lives as the most crucial elements of their success.

As the outgoing director of the United Jewish Appeal of Ottawa, I hope the Young Women's Leadership Council will continue to grow and flourish. It is a rich source of volunteers who are highly trained both in their own professions and in Jewish communal matters. They are our present and future leaders and by educating this exceptional group we ensure that the Jewish community will have a large pool of talent to draw from for years to come.

Grand opening of the Russian Jewish Centre

By Rita Bourianova

On April 30, the Jewish Russian Centre opened at Jewish Family Services.

The necessity of such a centre has been obvious for a long time. It is needed for various age groups of Russian immigrants who grew up in the former Soviet Union, an atheist country with a communist ideology. These people were denied the opportunity to get in touch with Jewish religion and culture. Consequently, the traditions of Jewish life were foreign to a number of generations. Here in Canada, poor knowledge of English makes it difficult for many immigrants to attend classes on Jewish history and religion. Now this obstacle has been removed.

An important element is the loneliness and subsequent alienation that many seniors are experiencing. At the centre they will have an opportunity to meet each other and widen their circle of friends.

We are planning to organize out-of-town trips and meetings with interesting people, actors and theatre groups. Members of the centre can read Russian newspapers and magazines, watch or rent Russian movies and borrow books from the Russian Judaica Library. We are also paying a lot of attention to the youth, offering programming in music, visual arts, dancing, Hebrew, drama, math, chess, as well as self-defence. In addition, people will be able to improve their skills in the Russian, English and French languages.

Classes in Jewish history and religion in the Russian language as well as celebration of Jewish holidays will have a very special place in the programming of the centre. Members will be informed of the programs through the Browsing in the Russian Judaica Library.

Russian Info Bulletin which will also contain advertisements promoting goods and services.

At the opening, Michael Markov, who initiated and created the centre, said that the aim of the centre is to attract and unite people of various professions, educational and intellectual levels and interests who share the same language and culture of the country in which they were raised. Michael then invited volunteers to participate in the work of the centre and there were a lot of enthusiastic people who wanted to get involved.

The first meeting, which was attended by over 120 individuals, indicated how warmly the idea of the Jewish Russian Centre was accepted and supported by the immigrant community. As they were leaving, they looked forward to many more meetings and hoped that this centre would become the home-away-from-home, the missing link between their past and the future.

The centre still has quite a number of obstacles to overcome not the least of which is of a financial nature, but, since there is a good organizer and a need for what the centre has to offer, we are hoping for a successful future.

Hillel Academy and JFS pave the way for Intergenerational Program

It is very exciting when ideas bear fruit. For some time now, Hillel Academy has wanted to involve community seniors in their school programming. Teacher, Toby Nathanson, will coordinate this new endeavor with JFS.

Although the program is in the early stages, areas have been identified where input from seniors would be very helpful such as remedial or enrichment help for a student, sharing personal family stories and teaching Yiddish songs.

Those who have expressed interest are looking forward to this new opportunity. It offers them a chance to be part of Hillel's buzzing environment and to contribute to the community. It is hoped that these new volunteers will become an integral part of the school and to this end they will be invited to school assemblies, Shabbat parties, celebrations and outings.

Senior volunteers for this intergenerational program need not have any particular training or skill, just an interest in spending quality time with students.

If transportation is a problem, the parents or teachers will be available to help out with rides.

We are all looking forward to this intergenerational program. If you would like to become a part of it or would like more information please call Bev (789-1800).

Ottawa Jewish Telephone Directory sports a brand-new look

By Kinneret Globberman

What's hot (in color, look and off the presses)? What's user-friendly, packed with fascinating facts and full of local advertisers' listings?

It's Na'amat Ottawa's Jewish Telephone Directory and it's so new and improved, you just won't recognize it.

Many people in the Ottawa Jewish community don't realize that the phone book is a Na'amat Ottawa fundraising initiative, one that has allowed the organization to continue supporting all of its many outstanding projects and programs in Israel, the newest of which is the Tel Aviv Shelter and Counselling Centre for battered wives and their families.

Subscribers will notice that the directory is now more user-friendly. The alphabetical listings are in a larger, bolded print; each section has a place for writing down often-used numbers; the handy reference guide includes a calendar of Jewish holidays to the year 2000 (5760); and the advertisers' listings now contain two new sections - Kids' Stuff and Just for Seniors.

Copies of the Directory have been delivered over the last few weeks. If you haven't received a copy, notify the Na'amat office (789-3104). The $20 cost is one of the best investments you'll make all year. You'll also be performing a mitzvah by helping Na'amat continue with its vital work and with the services Israel society has come to rely on. (Note: The office would also like to hear of any changes to be made to the listings; the book is only as accurate as you make it.)

Am Yisrael Chai - The People of Israel Live

Editor's note: Every two years, thousands of Jewish teens from around the world participate in March of the Living. This year, 10 Ottawans shared in this once-in-a-lifetime experience by marching the three-kilometre distance separating Auschwitz from Birkenau. From Poland, the trip proceeded to Israel. An excerpt from Debby Schildkraut's journal follows.

I am sitting in Birkenau after the March of the Living, the most meaningful and memorable moment of my life. The people all blended together and looked like a huge bright blue sea. I've never experienced the true meaning of Am Yisrael Chai until now.

Sitting here on the cobblestone in front of what was Crematoria #2, I feel united and connected with each and every one of the 7,000 participants. Rav Meir Lau, chief Ashkenazi rabbi of Israel, spoke and Prime Minister Netanyahu was here.

The March of the Living was the most significant experience I've had as a Jew. I've always been taught about Achdut, unity, but my opportunities to express and show unity with others have been limited. When I was walking from Auschwitz to Birkenau, arm-in-arm with eight fellow participants, I felt a deep sense of unity. Years ago, we walked the Death March together, helping each other out as best we could, attempting to ease or soothe the pain. Now we walk the March with feelings of triumph and glory because we survived and did not let the Nazis succeed.

I had another opportunity to express my feelings of closeness with the other Ottawa participants during our nightly debriefing sessions. Facilitated by Debbie Weiss, our Madricha, we would freely exchange our feelings and thoughts of the day. We were given the chance to say exactly how we felt and were respected for what we said.

The March of the Living taught me the importance of every single Jewish life and how our own task now is to respect one another and be kind to one another, because it is our love and unity that is our true strength. Am Yisrael Chai.

Grateful letter says it all

Contributing to CBB's Chai Campaign can make a difference to a Jewish child's summer ... and life

By Cynthia Nyman Engel

Included among the donations already received toward Camp B'nai Brith's Chai Campaign is a contribution from a single mother and her brood of grown, educated, now employed children.

A grateful letter that accompanied the family's generous cheque read as follows:

Certainly I am well aware that dollars alone could never repay what is owed by my family. I have often wondered what direction my children's lives might have taken had they been left on the streets for the summer.

I do know that B'nai Brith was unbelievably generous to us. Although it was so hard to ask for help, you always made it easier.

I hope that you are successful with your fundraising campaign. If anyone says, "Why should I ... ?" you can use us as a good example.

"That letter," says Campaign Chair Freda Lithwick, "is precisely what the Chai Campaign is all about. Camp B'nai Brith of Ottawa has never refused a needy child the opportunity to spend a summer at camp with other Jewish children.

"This is the first time in 62 years that we've had to come to the community," she says. "But the demand for subsidies has increased tremendously. And, it is important to realize that B'nai Brith is a non-profit camp and one of the very few camps that is run, to a very great extent, by volunteers."

One of those volunteers is canvasser Laya Shabinsky, mother, grandmother and former camper whose memories of CBB summers still burn bright.

"I loved Camp B'nai Brith," she says. "I was there from the time I was a young girl until I was a counsellor and I just loved it. I was a camper when we slept in tents that had no floorboards, when there were no showers, when we'd have to go out to the 'keybo.'"

"We never, ever complained about the food! We had so much ... a waterfront, wonderful activities together, friendships that have lasted a lifetime. Those years were very happy years. Camp B'nai Brith was a very important time in my life, in my children's lives and now in my grandchildren's lives.

"These days a lot of children need to be subsidized to share in the B'nai Brith experience," she says. "We must raise the money to provide scholarships for them to be a part of camp life and to update the aging facilities."

Lawyer Stephen Victor agrees. The 16-year veteran of Camp B'nai Brith, who "worked his way up from junior boy to camp director," says the camp has been a vital institution in our community since the 1940s.

"Camp B'nai Brith has enabled Jewish youngsters to have a place during the summer in which to meet other Jewish youngsters in a cultural, social, athletic and Jewish traditional setting," he says. "It is absolutely essential that the camp survive and that as many Ottawa Jewish children as possible be able to attend."

Stan Katz, Hillel Academy's former director of education, spent 10 consecutive years as director of the Quyon, Quebec summer facility.

"I thought Camp B'nai Brith was one of the greatest things this community offered," he says. "Yesterday's campers and counsellors are today's bright lights. Many of them are our community leaders today. I think there should be great emphasis put on looking after the children in the Ottawa Jewish community."

A host of volunteer canvassers is pitching in to make the community-wide campaign an unqualified success.

"Please help make a difference in a Jewish child's life," says Campaign Chair Lithwick. "When your canvasser calls, please give generously."

Parents honor David Cantor with JNF project

Seeing the devastation wrought by fire in the JNF Forest outside Jerusalem had a major impact on David Cantor, a young man with a great respect for nature and the out-of-doors. That was three years ago, when David was 10 and his family was in Israel to dedicate a JNF project established in the Arava by his parents in honor of the Bar Mitzvah of their eldest son, Jeremy.

This May, when David became Bar Mitzvah, Marcia and Barry Cantor decided it would be particularly appropriate to commemorate the special event in David's life by establishing a foundation in JNF's Jubilee Forest at Yair.

"David was deeply moved by the aftermath of the fire," says Barry. "Marcia and I felt it was a good idea to link David's name in perpetuity with JNF's rejuvenation of the land."

The family will travel to Israel in August for the formal dedication of the David Cantor project. "And," Barry promises, "all being well, for his Bar Mitzvah, we'll link our youngest son, Samuel Benjamin, with still another of JNF's excellent projects."

Eleven new inscriptions added to Sefer Bar/Bat Mitzvah

Mazal Tov and Yasher Koach to Joel Dubrofsky, Jesse Granofsky, Jacqueline Greenberg, Joshua Nadolny, David Schacter, Noah Shechtman, Andrew Spigel, Taryn Wener, Ruth Zackon and Adam Jacob Zaret, recent B'nai Mitzvah whose proud parents chose to mark the significant milestone by inscribing their young celebrant's name in the JNF Sefer Bar/Bat Mitzvah.

In appreciation for his extraordinary good deed and in honor of his Bar Mitzvah, the name David Cantor has been inscribed in the Sefer Bar/Bat Mitzvah by Ellen, Ray, Michael and Tamara Fathi.

... And two are inscribed in the Golden Book

In honor of the Bar Mitzvah of Andrew Spigel, his proud grandparents Laura and Gordon Spigel have inscribed their grandson's name in the JNF Golden Book.

Helene Zaret and Dr. Sidney Kronick, proud grandparents of Adam Jacob Zaret, have inscribed his name in the JNF Golden Book on the occasion of his Bar Mitzvah.

JET offers unique opportunity to expand your Jewish mind

By Shelli Kimmel

Book off the week of July 5 to 11 and prepare yourself for an incomparable Torah Study experience. Once again, members of the Ottawa Jewish community are being offered a unique opportunity to expand their Jewish minds during the JET Adult Torah Study Week.

This week promises to provide everyone, no matter your branch of Judaism, no matter your level of knowledge, with a stimulating thought-provoking program.

Returning as one of the featured lecturers, Rabbi Yitzchak Feigenbaum will teach a women's Chumash class each morning and a men's Chumash class each evening. In addition, he will present two of the lectures in the Evening Lecture series and will be the guest lecturer at the Shabbaton held on the final weekend at Congregation Machzikei Hadas.

Rabbi Michael Skobac is another featured lecturer. Participants at the JET Shabbaton in November found him to be "very interesting, easy to follow and down to earth". Skobac will teach the Mitzvah a Day classes held each morning and will present two of the Evening Lectures.

An added dimension will be a special three-day Counter-Missionary Survival Seminar offered by Skobac who has worked extensively for Jews for Judaism. The program will be held Monday through Wednesday, 12:30 to 2:00 pm, and the featured topics include "Will the Real Messiah Please Stand Up" - Understanding the Jewish Concept of Messiah; and "Sin and Satan: Jewish vs Christian Perspective".

JET looks forward to the return to Ottawa of Rabbi Yosef Skaist who was instrumental in the creation of JET and is currently living in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. He will be teaching the daily Gemara class for men.

There are basic courses offered as well. Rabbi Zischa Shaps will explore four fundamental topics of Judaism including Shabbat, Belief in G-d, Jewish Observances and Judaism and Sexuality. Participants will be given a fresh perspective on the philosophical underpinnings of these important areas of Jewish life. In addition, a Learn-to-Read-Hebrew class is offered each morning.

For anyone unable to take the time off during the day, the evening classes offer the solution. Along with the Men's Chumash Class and Basic Judaism, Carol Fried will teach a Navi class for women.

Following the classes, The Evening Lecture Series offers a well-rounded selection of topics. Rabbi Feigenbaum will jumpstart the week with his lecture "Two Jews, Three Shuls: There's Nothing Like a Good Argument". Rabbi Skobac will speak on "Judaism and Vegetarianism" and "The Jew in the Lotus and Everywhere Else but the Synagogue - The Spiritual Crisis Facing Our Community". Rabbi Shaps' topic will be "The Chosen People - Chosen for What?"

Participants can sign up for a full day, half day or individual classes. All daily classes take place at Congregation Machzikei Hadas. Sunday and Monday evenings, the classes and Evening Lecture Series will be held at Congregation Machzikei Hadas and Tuesday through Thursday at Congregation Beth Shalom West.

Anyone wishing more information on classes, the schedule or costs is asked to call Shelli Kimmel (726-9125).

WALKATHON '98

יובל החמישים לישראל
ISRAEL 50 JUBILEE
חגיגה - חגיגה 1948-1998

Walk it ... bike it ... blade it ... Did it!

It wasn't just another year for the UJA Walkathon! With Israel's 50th birthday celebration, and the Soloway Community Centre almost complete, it was a very special year!

It all started on June 7, at 9:30 am. There were walkers, bikers and skaters. Everyone came out to get involved in celebrating Israel's birthday. The weather was questionable, but it held out, and no one got wet!

The challenging route kept everyone on their toes (some more than others). There were Ceres juices, oranges and, of course, Freezies to fuel people along the way. When the participants completed their journey "through Israel" and returned back home "to Canada", the real fun began.

There was something for everyone! From face painting and pony rides for the "little kids" to the massages and rock climbing wall for the "big kids", it was all a huge hit. There was entertaining music provided by the JCC Band and, of course, delicious refreshments served up personally by Jack Smith and Yudi Chein.

Before we knew it, it was all over for another year. There were some tired feet and some full tummies, but we all went home feeling that we had celebrated whole-heartedly!

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many volunteers and all the participants. A special thanks to my co-chair Gregory Sanders, Jeff Hochstadter, and UJA staff Tal Maoz, Isaac Gould and Todd Neuman.

Thanks to all the efforts of our community, the 1998 UJA Walkathon was a huge success!

Dead Sea Scrolls provide key to deeper understanding of Judaism and Christianity

By Tibor Krausz

Jewish members of the audience that packed Agudath Israel Synagogue for a lecture by Dr. Adolfo Roitman did more than just allow themselves to be treated to an edifying audiovisual program and a subsequent scholarly lecture on the Dead Sea Scrolls. Even if unwittingly they participated in the process of reclaiming the ancient Jewish manuscripts just by showing interest in the scrolls, asserted Roitman, who spoke in April at a stopover in Ottawa during his lecture tour in North and South America.

"It's ironic that we have to reclaim ancient Jewish manuscripts - that is, texts written by Jews, for Jews - from Christian scholars," said Roitman, who is curator of the Shrine of the Book in Jerusalem, which houses the greatest collection of the Dead Sea scrolls on display in the Israel Museum. "But the sorry fact is that that's what we have to do now."

Roitman briefly explained that for the better part of the five decades since the 2,000-year-old parchments were first brought to light in the Judean Desert in the late 1940s, practically all outside access to the majority of the scrolls was denied by a few privileged Christian scholars who were members of the Dead Sea Fund under the auspices of the French École Biblique. It has been only in recent years that Jewish scholars could begin to study the Dead Sea Scrolls in their entirety, said Roitman, who has a PhD in Ancient Jewish Thought from Hebrew University and bears a marked resemblance to the Israeli psychic Uri Geller.

But why should the scrolls matter?

The Dead Sea Scrolls were found in 11 caves between 1947 and 1956 in a series of excavations in the vicinity of what is now the village of Khirbet Qumran at the northwestern tip of the Dead Sea. The Qumran cache comprises more or less complete scrolls as well as parchment segments from 800 documents written probably between 200 BCE and 70 CE by sectarians whose identity is still debated.

The documents, Roitman explained, fall into three categories based on their content: some 200 copies of the Hebrew Bible, including all its books except the Book of Esther, the only part in the Bible that does not mention God; some 570 documents detailing the rules, laws and beliefs of the Qumran community as well as sectarians' interpretations of the Jewish scriptures; and the remaining documents belonging to the apocryphal literature, or those religious works such as the Book of the Maccabees and the Book of Judith that were later left out of authoritative compilations of the Hebrew Bible.

The Qumran copies of Biblical books have shown the Hebrew Bible to have remained virtually intact, with only a few minor alterations here and there, over the last 2,000 years, Roitman said. The oldest known versions of the Tanach before were copies of the Masoretes, a sect of meticulous Jewish scribes who compiled their version only a millennium ago.

"The earliest known copies of the Book of Isaiah, for instance, dated back only to medieval times," explained Roitman. The Prophet Isaiah lived in the land of Israel in the 8th century BCE. So if you want to know (with greater accuracy) what Isaiah actually said, you now have a text that you can consult."

What Roitman refers to is the eight-metre-long Qumran scroll parchment inscribed with all the 66 chapters of the Book of Isaiah, which is now on display inside the Shrine of the Book in the Israel Museum in Jerusalem and is the only complete manuscript ever found at Qumran. Not surprisingly, Roitman calls the Shrine of the Book "a modern-day Holy of Holies" for the Jewish people.

To many scholars, however, more important than biblical copies are scrolls about the Qumran community itself, he added. These documents, written in Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek, allow scholars to reconstruct with greater accuracy the so-called inter-Testamental era, an otherwise rather muddled period in history, which gave birth to both Rabbinic Judaism and Christianity, he explained. The documents provide solid evidence that fundamental doctrines of faith in both religions stemmed from the same body of traditional Jewish teachings, and the Qumran texts provide the key to a deeper understanding of the origins and evolution of both.

"Thanks to the scrolls, we can reconstruct the development of Jewish liturgy through reconstructing the origins of the Midrashim based (in part) on Qumran sectarrians' interpretations of the Bible," Roitman told a captive audience.

Even 50 years after the scrolls' discovery, however, opinion continues to vary widely as to the identity of the sectarians who created them. Many scholars have used the scrolls as an empty screen onto which to project their own distinct interpretations, Roitman explained. Scholars believe the Qumran settlement to have been everything from an isolationist religious retreat to a busy trading post to a desert fortress to a wealthy manor house to a quarantine station.

This consensus view, set forth by Father Roland de Vaux of the École Biblique who first excavated Qumran, has had it that sectarians were members of the Essenes, an ascetic Jewish sect, who supposedly wrote the scrolls over the course of some 200 years and hid them in the surrounding caves at the approach of the Roman legions in 68 CE. For a while, all archaeological and textual evidence pointed in the direction of this scenario. But as more and more scholars gained access to more and more scrolls over time, they started challenging the universally accepted view in favor of new theories, Roitman said.

Eminent Jewish historian Cecil Roth took the lead in proposing a whole differ-

The Soloway JCC Grand Opening to take place Sept. 13

Sunday, September 13 – a red letter day in our community's history! It's the Grand Opening of the Soloway Jewish Community Centre, in the beautiful Joseph and Rose Ages Building at Broadview and Kerr Avenues.

After years of planning, endless meetings, a tremendous capital campaign, and months of watching the building take shape in the fields of the Jewish Community Campus, our community's long-awaited dream will become a reality. The Ottawa Jewish community will have a new communal home. The Soloway Jewish Community Centre hopes to be the centre of your life and the lives of your children in the 21st Century.

The entire community is invited to come together to celebrate this milestone.

The celebration will start with a "Legacy Relay Race" from the old JCC on Chapel Street to the Jewish Community Campus. The race will symbolically express the motto of the capital campaign, "Our Dream - Our Legacy." A chain of runners and walkers – young and old, representing all sectors of our community – will pass a baton containing a mezuzah from hand to hand. The route will stretch from downtown along the Parkway and up Broadview Avenue to the Jewish Community Campus. The final runner will carry the mezuzah to the Joseph and Rose Ages Building, home of the Soloway Jewish Community Centre, and it will be mounted on the doorway. Then the ribbon across the door will be cut and the party will begin.

The Soloway JCC Grand Opening will run from 1:00 - 4:00 pm. There will be music, entertainment, cake, balloons, and lots of ruach.

Guided tours will take you through the Soloway JCC. You will see the Gym, the Aerobics/Dance Studio, the Fitness Centre, the indoor Pool, the Social Hall, the J Cafe, the Art Studio, Library, Teen Lounge and Children's Area. At every stop, you'll see the JCC in action. There will be weavers in the Loom Room, workouts in the Aerobics Studio, sports taking place in the gym, demos in the pool and neat stuff happening in the Teen Lounge and Children's Area.

"I believe you will be impressed by the open and welcoming feel of the building," comments JCC President Jeff Gould. "When we sat down with architect Barry Hobin we told him we wanted our JCC to create the spirit of a neighbourhood or a village square. This building has captured the feeling we want to promote."

"I urge everyone to join us on September 13 for the Soloway JCC Grand Opening. This event will be much more than the opening of a building. It will be the beginning of a renewed Jewish life and community spirit in Ottawa."

Community invited to 'One Last Dance' Sept. 6 to bid farewell to Chapel Street JCC

By Phyllis Leith

One Fifty One Chapel. For longtime members of the Ottawa Jewish Community, that address evokes many memories. Riding the street car downtown to meet your friends at the JCC on a Sunday afternoon. Running the gauntlet of people standing on both sides of the building's endless stairs in order to get down to where the music and laughter were coming from. The aroma of the hot dogs that greeted you when you got there and Abe and Joe Nadrich and the late Mr. Baslaw behind the snack bar counter.

The Ottawa Jewish Community is on the threshold of a new era. In September the Jewish Community Centre and the Vaad will move into the state-of-the-art Joseph and Rose Ages Building on the new Jewish Community Campus. Broadview and Kerr will be our new community address. The Chapel Street JCC will fade into a memory – for those who grew up in it, a beloved memory.

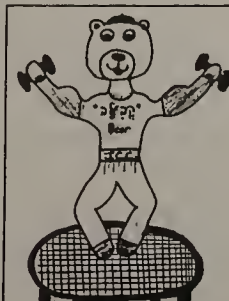

On Sunday afternoon, September 6, you can recapture that memory and say goodbye to the Chapel Street JCC in a fun and very fitting manner. The Jewish Community Centre and Congregation Beth Shalom (which will remain at the Chapel Street location) invite the community to come together for 'One Last Dance' at 151 Chapel Street. There will be hot dogs cooking in the hallway, music from the 50's and 60's playing, and crowds of kids (a little older and wiser now) meeting and greeting each other.

This will be a happening! Organizers hope that people from all sectors of our community – new Ottawans, olimmers, and the younger generation – will come together to say goodbye to the old JCC and to relive the spirit of 151 Chapel in the old days when it was the centre of the Ottawa Jewish community.

If you keep in touch with any of the "Ole Gang" who have moved away from Ottawa, be sure to invite them back for 'One Last Dance.' If you would like to be involved in planning this event, or have any ideas or pictures to share, please call Phyllis Leith at 727-0828, Sid Katz at B20-6644 or Barry Tamoff at 225-1301.

Mark Sunday, September 6, 2:00 to 5:00 pm, on your calendar. Then come on down to 151 Chapel Street for 'One Last Dance' to bid a fond farewell to the old JCC.

Kehilla Bear a winner

The winner of the Soloway JCC Mascot Contest is Kehilla Bear, created by Shira Taylor, a grade 6 student at Hillel Academy. Kehilla (Community) Bear will promote community strength. He also gives great bear hugs.

The Soloway JCC receives gift of Judaic art from local artist

By Estelle Melzer

The new Hyman and Ruth Soloway Jewish Community Centre, housed in the Joseph and Rose Ages Building, has received a unique gift from Ottawa artist Shelley Engel.

Engel has created a stained glass depiction of the story of Adam and Eve, caught at the moment of temptation when they are about to eat of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. This stunning work of art is 3 feet by 4 feet with a granite border and built-in illumination. It is designed in vivid shades of blue, green and pink, with jewelled stones, a signature feature of Engel's art, embedded in the work.

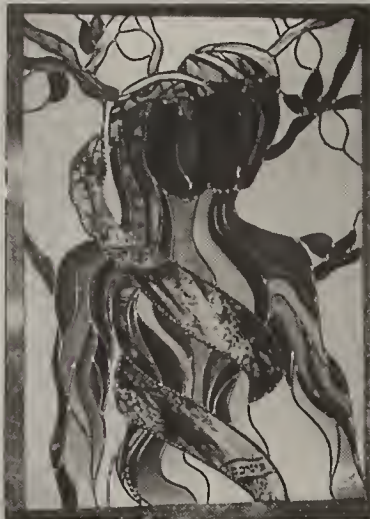

The abstract portrayal of Adam and Eve is based on the concept that they were created in an androgenous state. Their two bodies appear intertwined and fused. The Serpent, in shimmering shades of blue and green, is coiled around this fused form and whispers in the ear of Eve that she will become "aware." The Hebrew words, "v'neikchu eyneichem" (and their eyes will open), are imprinted on the Serpent's skin. The Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil is in the background. Engel has depicted the fruit as a citrone or etrog - as suggested by various commentaries - rather than as the more familiar apple.

"The concept of this piece is awareness, knowledge," Engel explains. "Adam and Eve are about to taste the fruit of knowledge and their eyes will open. I thought that this theme would fit in well with the purpose of the Jewish Community Centre. The JCC will be a place of Jewish learning which will open many people's eyes and hearts to Judaic knowledge."

Shelley Engel has been involved in promoting Judaic knowledge for many years, both through her work as a teacher at Star of David Hebrew School and through her art. Working primarily in fabrics, she has created a variety of Judaic-themed artworks. Vivid colours and shimmering jewels and sequins are prominent features of her striking work.

Engel is married to Dr. Andre Engel and the mother of three daughters, Saritte, Tehillah and Marninah.

The Jewish Community Centre extends a warm thank you to Shelley Engel on behalf of the entire Jewish community. "We are particularly pleased to be able to display the work of an artist from our own community in the building which will be our community gathering place," commented JCC President Jeff Gould. "This work of art will enhance the Jewish mandate of the Soloway JCC and

V'neikchu Eyneichem - And Their Eyes Will Open
A stained-glass work of art by Shelley Engel

the Jewish atmosphere of the Joseph and Rose Ages Building in a very fitting and beautiful way."

The JCC is in the process of establishing an Art Committee which will plan and implement the appropriate display of future gifts and acquisitions. "It is our hope that the Soloway JCC and the Joseph and Rose Ages Building will, over the years, become a showcase for Judaic art and artifacts."

In the early stages of its development, the Jewish Community Campus was the recipient of a major work of Judaic art, donated by Saul and Edna Goldfarb. It is a magnificent six foot high menorah, originally lit at the end of the Six Day War in Jerusalem. This historic menorah will hang in the lobby of the Soloway JCC above the elevator - immediately visible to anyone who enters the building. It will be lit during Chanukah and community celebrations.

Our entire community is enriched by the generous donation of these gifts of art.

New Faces at the Soloway JCC

Ellen Miller Youth Director

Ellen Miller has joined the Soloway team as Youth Director. She will be responsible for developing programming for our community's youth, from kindergarten to Grade 13.

It's quite a challenge," Ellen exclaimed. "Kids are one of the most important constituencies of the Soloway JCC. After all, they are our future."

"We'll start with the basics - great after school activities that kids will want to be part of, and a teen program that listens to what teens are interested in. Over the year, we hope to build on this, creating new programs as we talk to kids and parents and get feedback."

Ellen's approach to programming is to listen to what people want. Both by training and experience she has learned to be responsive to people's needs.

Ellen has a Bachelor of Arts degree from Carleton University in Sociology and Psychology and a Social Service Worker Diploma from Algonquin College. She has also had many years of experience, both as a volunteer and professional, working with teens.

For six summers, she was a counsellor for Westcoast Connection Travel Camp, touring the west coast and Europe with teens aged 14 to 16. She has also had experience as a counsellor at Camp Gesher and JCC Day Camp, and was a BBOY Youth Advisor.

Her volunteer experience has also been very people-oriented. She is a Tamir Foundation board member, and has been involved in Young Women's Leadership Council for three years. She has also worked for the Children's Aid Society, supervising visits between parents and their children.

"Our community finally has a place that Jewish youth will want to hang out in," Ellen says. "I would like to create an open, welcoming atmosphere for them at the Soloway JCC. Children who come after school for classes in art, jazz dance, swimming, or Israeli dancing, will meet their friends and have a snack at the J Cafe. Teens who come to the building in the evening for sports or fitness will have their own space, the Teen Lounge, to hang out in after their class and hook up with their friends. The goal of the Youth Department is to make the Soloway JCC the new community neighbourhood for our Jewish youth," Ellen concludes.

Lisa Melamed Adult Programming Director

Lisa Melamed has joined the Soloway JCC as Director of Adult Programming. She will be responsible for all adult, senior adult and family life programming - including visual art classes, Jewish education and life cycle programs, parenting classes, special interest programs and more.

Lisa brings to the JCC a strong background in programming. Both as a staff member and a volunteer, she has been involved in planning a wide variety of programs in the Jewish community and the community-at-large.

She has an Early Childhood Degree and has worked in a variety of day-care and community centre settings, where she has planned and implemented programs for children, teens and parents. She was a JCC Day Camp Administrator, responsible for supervising staff and planning special events. She also worked as Race Secretary for the National Capital Marathon.

As a volunteer, her enthusiasm and innovative approach to programming have enriched the Ottawa Jewish community in many ways. She is a member of the Board of Jewish Family Services and represents the Board at speaking engagements throughout the city. Her experience with JFS sensitized her to the problems of poverty in the Jewish community and the alienation this poverty often engenders and inspired her to begin a Chaverim program called adopt-a-family.

She has also been very active at Temple Israel Synagogue, where she chaired the Purim celebration and is coordinator of volunteers for ongoing and special events. Her other involvements have included the Kinsman/Kinette Club, the Riverside Hospital teen volunteer program, JSU-Hillel and the La Leche League.

Lisa is married to Jamie Melamed and is the mother of Hartley, aged two.

The Soloway JCC welcomes babies and preschoolers

By Estelle Melzer

Hilary Clinton's famous phrase, "It takes a village to raise a child," could have been the motto of the Soloway JCC's GANON (Preschool) Program. "We wanted to make our community's young families feel that the Soloway is their village, their home away from home," said Director Joy Levine. "Young parents have so many pressures on them - careers, financial, social - and often are raising their children without the help of an extended family or support group. The JCC can give them that sense of family, providing quality programs for those all-important early childhood years, Jewish enrichment, community connection and a network of friendships."

This fall, when the Soloway JCC opens its doors, it will offer a wide array of programs for children from the age of three months to six years.

The Baby Plus program offers two classes for babies aged 6 to 18 months and accompanying adult: Musical Babes, an introduction to music featuring song, movement, finger play and instruments; and Baby Tumble Time, a movement class using a variety of age appropriate apparatus.

Shabbat Shalom, for tots 18 months to 2 years and adult, is an introduction to Shabbat and the holidays through music, crafts, stories and traditional celebrations.

The two-year old program features: Tumble Time for Twos, an active run and tumble program to help develop gross motor skills; Musical Twos, a music and movement program; and Time for Twos, a twice a week "slow separation" nursery program, with gradually decreasing caregiver interaction.

Bereshit is a three-year-old nursery program, available for either two, three or five days a week. It integrates Hebrew, French, library and gym into an innovative and thematic-based curriculum.

The JCC's very successful Garinim program continues with a special twist. Garinim AM for four-year-olds uses an integrated thematic approach to play and learning in English, French and Hebrew, with gym and library as added features.

Garinim PM for 3-5 year olds is an exciting program offering a different specialty each day of the week. Havivah Shelanu-Our Environment,

Taking care of babies in the Garinim program on Mondays, will introduce your child to environmental issues and Mother Nature through art projects featuring recycled material and natural resources.

Hitamlut-Fantasy Fun on Tuesdays, gives your child the opportunity to develop her imagination in a creative and fun atmosphere. An added feature is "All Sorts of Sports," which focuses on specific skill development for various sports.

Shiuk Musikah - Making Music, on Wednesdays, includes a music, movement and theory component as well as instrument-making workshops and themes revolving around music and sound.

Mishakey Mayim - Waterworks, on Thursdays, includes swim instruction and free swim plus classroom activities related to a water theme.

Yahadut - Jewish Joys on Fridays highlights the joys of Jewish holidays and rituals and promotes a sense of pride in our heritage.

GANON also offers a free Lunch Bunch supervised hour.

Weekends are also fun time for the Soloway JCC's youngest members.

A variety of Sunday morning preschool programs cater to different interests. Cooking with Kinder is a hands-on cooking class requiring no cooking in which kids will create a variety of fun and (even) edible dishes. Amazing Science offers two hours of amazing and crazy science stuff. Multi-media Mania introduces the young child to a wide array of materials and techniques.

On the first Sunday of every month, parents and children can get together to enjoy Bagels n' Books in the Activity Gallery in the Soloway lobby. "Celebrity" hosts will be the featured storytellers.

The Soloway JCC has tried to make it as easy as possible for young families to participate in its programs. Boker Tov - Early Morning Care is available for all children (including Hillel youngsters) from 7:45 to 8:30 am, and an After School Care program is available until 6:00 pm. For parents who want to participate in their own classes at the Soloway JCC, GANON offers Kinder Care Corner, a babysitting program for children aged 3 months to 6 years.

For more information about the Soloway JCC's GANON program please call Joy Levine at 729-9533 or Rhona Levine at 789-1818.

Focusing on Health

Strength Conditioning for Youth

Strength conditioning has traditionally not been recommended for children. This ban is based on various historically accepted myths and misconceptions. In reality, a well designed strength conditioning program for pre-pubescent and adolescent youth can have significant benefits.

The historical aversion to strength conditioning for children was based on the risk associated with heavy weight lifting. It is true that heavy weight bearing exercise may encumber a child's epiphyseal plate formations, as they are incomplete, and there may be a risk of trauma to the uncalcified segments located at the distal end of the long bones. In layman's terms, heavy weight bearing at a young age may stunt growth. Weight room trainers are well advised to avoid prescribing heavy weight lifting exercises for youngsters.

However, strength conditioning can be prescribed for children safely in many other forms, some without the use of weight equipment and some with weight equipment specifically designed for youth.

The most obvious exercises without equipment are those that use the child's own weight as the load to create the resistance necessary for the development of muscular strength, endurance and stamina. These include exercises such as pushups and chin-ups which develop the upper body torso and large muscle mass areas - biceps, pectorals and back muscles, shoulders and triceps.

These traditional methods of strength training are effective but youngsters often prefer something more glamorous to keep them motivated.

Some manufacturers of strength training equipment (AMF, Schull, PACE) now offer scaled down versions of their products to fit the physical stature of children. Kids are attracted to the concept of working out on equipment similar to that used by mom and dad. Getting youngsters involved in strength training and motivated to continue is the most important component of any program.

Children today are growing up in an environment that encourages them to be sedentary. Schools have reduced their physical education programs and after school time is increasingly spent in front of the television or computer. Obesity amongst children is on the rise and an epidemic of heart disease and other ailments looms in the future. Anything we can do to encourage our kids to be more active and fit will help ensure for them a healthy adulthood.

For children who participate in a fitness or strength conditioning program, the rewards, however, are more immediate - increased self-confidence and body image and a sense of accomplishment and empowerment.

Hard ground ball to second.

Jewish Men's Softball League veteran Lou Honigman dove, rolled and stopped the ball from reaching the outfield. This is nothing new for Honigman. He has been doing it for the last 50 years!

Lou Honigman is a true living legend of the JMSL. He has withstood the test of time and a severe foot injury to record this milestone - 50 years in the league. He marked the start of his 50th JMSL season on June 8 at Carlington Park with a sharp single to right.

Lou started as a shortstop, playing at the York Street School diamond when he was fifteen years old. He has spent most of his career in the JMSL as a pitcher. To this day, he frustrates opposing batters with his assortment of control pitches and spins.

Lou has seen a lot of changes over the half century.

In 1948, playing conditions were drastically different. "We played on rock and gravel. If you slid, you tore your pants but nobody had money for another pair of pants," said Lou.

The level of competition was also different. Players were required to try out for squads if they wanted to earn membership on one of the five teams. He also remembers games that were attended by up to 150 people. Umpires were paid by a collection hat passed through the crowd.

Lou also notes another difference in the old days. "We didn't play with gloves in those days. Only the catcher and first baseman used gloves."

While playing shortstop, Lou severely injured his hand. Rather than miss games he decided to break with tradition and became the first player (other than the first baseman or catcher) to use a glove.

"At first the guys were laughing and kibitzing with me over it but they all changed over to gloves the next season. It has made the game safer and better."

Lou's long list of accomplishments reads like Hall of Fame material.

He has won 11 JMSL Championships and has pitched at such a high level for so long that the league's annual award has been named in his honour.

Lou was also the first recipient of the Bill Sternberg Memorial Award for sportsmanship, ability and good conduct.

Lou is proud of another first - the first father and son (Allen) on the same team.

His favourite season was the year he and son Mark put together a team of players 19 and younger. They played the Shore Starz in the final. Because his players had to go back to school, the games were played in quick succession - one on Saturday night and three on Sunday. Lou pitched all four games, winning the championship.

In true Sweet Lou style, he loved every minute of it!

It is the love for the game and its role in the community which keeps Lou coming back decade after decade.

"The best thing about this league is Jewish boys getting together and starting friendships," he says.

He also derives great satisfaction from playing with the sons and grandsons of men he has played with in his long career. While the players used to play with more intensity, he feels the quality of the athletes has risen over the years - except for the pitching.

When asked about his future in the league, Lou responds, "We'll see what happens. I take each year one at a time." This healthy attitude has kept him playing well with men more than half his age, with his joy for the game and the JMSL still burning brightly.

Dead Sea Scrolls provide key to deeper understanding

ent scenario in his treatise on the scrolls, The Dead Sea Scrolls: A New Historical Approach, in 1965. Roth believed the Qumran settlement housed, far from placid Essenes, a group of Sicarii, the ultra-violent fringe of the Zealot movement in 1st century Palestine. The Zealots were hyper-patriotic religious fundamentalists, whose revivalist movement culminated in the Jewish Revolt of 66-73 CE and led to the destruction of the Second Temple.

Since then, many other scholars have advanced their own anti-Essene theories. Prof. Norman Golb of the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago for one denies any connection between the Qumran settlement and the scrolls found in nearby caves. Golb believes that the scrolls could only have come from a major religious centre, not from a small desert outpost such as the Qumran settlement, which more scholars agree could never have housed more than 150 people at any given time. In Golb's view, the Qumran documents were hidden in the desert by some priests of the Jerusalem Temple who he believes spirited away a cache of sacred documents from the Temple library and stashed them in the Judean desert "for safe keeping" shortly before the destruction of the Temple by the Romans.

"At least 500 different handwritings are detectable in the 800 texts of Qumran," Gold said at an international conference on the scrolls in Jerusalem last July, organized by Roitman. "The Jews of the capital would have gone to considerable lengths to hide the treasures of the city, including the scrolls kept in its libraries, prior to the tightening of the Roman siege."

Prof. Robert Eisenman of California State University believes otherwise. His book James the Brother of Jesus (1997) advocates his theory that Qumran was the centre of the early Christian Church under the protection of the Apostle James "the Lord's Brother", who faithfully carried on with Jesus' teachings after his crucifixion until the treachery of a sectarian. The traitor, who Eisenman believes was Saul of Tarsus turned St. Paul, applied new rules in favor of old ones, creating a brand-new religion in the process that fell far outside the community's original intentions. His betrayal was seen as a mortal sin in sectarians' eyes by making the purest form of Judaism accessible to non-Jewish outsiders. His new religion would, however, soon leave its cradle in Palestine and conquer the Western world, severing all its ties with its Jewish source in the process.

Prof. Roitman dismissed Eisenman's theory as "plain wrong" in an interview after his lecture, asserting that "the time factor is unsuitable" and that "no New Testament fragment has been discovered in any of the Qumran caves." Yet, Roitman hands it to Eisenman that an early Christian connection may not seem entirely unfounded.

The Qumran sectarians, who considered themselves "the Sons of Light" and all the rest of humanity "the Sons of Darkness" believed that they were living in an apocalyptic age. Sectarians pinned all their hopes for personal redemption on their "Teacher of Righteousness", a messianic figure who they believed was sent by God to interpret and fulfil the Mosaic laws and the Prophets' apocalyptic visions. They called this messianic figure "the Son of God" and "the Son of the Most High". Strikingly, says Roitman, in the Gospel of Luke in the New Testament, Jesus is called just that.

"For years, Christian scholars believed that such expressions were coined by the early Christians because they were not known in Jewish literature. Now, thanks to Qumran, we know that these were originally Jewish expressions, commonly used by Jews at the time of Jesus," Roitman said.

More than linguistic curiosities, such striking revelations may shed light on the roots of traditional Christian misrepresentations of Judaism and may also help explain the origins of Christian anti-Semitism, Roitman added.

"According to the Gospels, Jesus said, 'As you know it is written (in Jewish texts) that you have to love your neighbors and hate your enemies. But I say, love your enemies!'" Roitman explained, referring to an oft-quoted pronouncement by Jesus, that Christian theologians saw as his distancing himself from Judaism and used this as a pretext for branding Judaism an "ungodly creed".

"This sentence became a cornerstone of Christianity. But while it is indeed written (in Leviticus) that you have to love your neighbors, where is it written in ancient Jewish texts that you have to hate your enemies? What was Jesus talking about? Today, we know the answer: it's written in the Dead Sea Scrolls."

Because of such textual consonance, the Dead Sea Scrolls have become a point of interaction between Jewish and Christian scholars and have fostered intense inter-faith dialogue, Roitman said. But the Qumran documents would offer precious little to Jews if they only helped explain the origins of Christianity. In fact, the Dead Sea Scrolls can tell us a great deal not only about a defining moment in Judaism 2,000 years ago but also about Judaism's momentous present and future, Roitman asserted.

"Through the Dead Sea Scrolls, we can better understand our present religious differences (between the different streams) and our pluralistic rights to Judaism," said Roitman, who holds a Conservative Rabbinical Diploma from the Latin-America Rabbinical Seminary. "The scrolls prove that it's part of our historical quality as a people that we've always had different trends in Judaism. Maybe it's our essence as a nation that we should always have differences of opinion in interpreting God's words."

TAMIR CELEBRATES with BRUNCH on BROADVIEW

Throw together plenty of "nosherei" a dedicated crowd, lots of sunshine and a dash of kvelling and well, you've got Brunch on Broadview!

This fundraising event, chaired by Roz Taller, was held to celebrate the Tamir Foundation's official opening of its new home for nine adults with developmental disabilities.

"We are ecstatic," says Tamir President Gilda Good. "The support we have received from the Jewish Community has been outstanding. And we are truly grateful to the Ministry of Community and Social Services and the Vaad for their participation in this innovative partnership to reunite individuals with their families and community after decades of isolation in institutions."

"To have Pam back in the community with us again, well... it's a dream come true," says Betty Dover about her daughter.

Located on Broadview Avenue directly across the street from the new Joseph and Rose Ages Building, the new Tamir home is the first such residential program in Canada to be fully integrated into a Jewish community.

In praise of Art Works columnist

Dear Editor,

I am not in the habit of writing "a letter to the editor". But having just read Rose Ann Hoffenberg's article about Charles Daudelin (Ottawa Jewish Bulletin, May 18), I am moved to take pen in hand!

Rose Ann has taken a difficult piece of art-work from a complex art period and made it not only understandable, but by giving it a context, she has shown us how art grows and changes and how connected its meanings are!

Thank you, Rose Ann. Keep your articles coming.

Social Action Committee explores additional services

Dear Editor,

The members of the Social Action and Public Policy Committee of Agudath Israel Congregation were delighted to see the Kosher Food Bank mentioned, along with the Tikvah Fund, in the President's Vaad Report (Ottawa Jewish Bulletin, May 18, 1998).

Under the leadership of Past-President of Agudath Israel Congregation, Marion Mayman, the Social Action and Public Policy Committee was formed in January, 1997. The Kosher Food Bank, founded and operated by Agudath Israel Congregation, through this committee, was the first initiative emerging from this group. In effect, the Social Action and Public Policy Committee inaugurated its activities with the establishment of the Kosher Food Bank.

Working in conjunction with Jewish Family Services (JFS), which ensures anonymity, the volunteers involved with the Kosher Food Bank made the initial delivery in March, 1997. Regularly scheduled distributions are made and emergency provisions are supplied whenever the need arises.

We are extremely grateful to all those individuals, groups, foundations and businesses in the community who have contributed, and continue to contribute, food and money to the Kosher Food Bank.

In addition to the Kosher Food Bank, the Social Action and Public Policy Committee offers tutoring to needy children and assists in recruiting volunteers for JFS, with whom close ties are maintained. We are exploring ways and means of assisting children at risk. The committee also has conducted its first annual, highly successful, Tikun Olan Fair/Mitzvah Day, an event which showcased various community services. We are represented on the Vaad's Emergency Measures Committee. At present we, along with JFS, are considering a request for the establishment of a Jewish Bereavement Support group. Recently the committee has expressed its views to the Premier of Ontario regarding food allowance needs of financially deprived pregnant women in our province.

Inquiries may be directed to the undersigned at 563-4643.

Dr. Saul Ross, Ed.D.
Chair, Social Action and Public Policy Committee

Last Annual Meeting held at 151 Chapel Street

award is that he lives up to all his commitments, be they professional, personal or volunteer".

He added that "with Charles you don't get excuses - what you do get is effort and results - with a little laughter along the way".

In accepting the award, Schachnow lived up to his introduction. The audience laughed as he related his initiation to volunteerism working as a young boy on a JNF Telethon organized by his mother. "I knew then that I was a good salesman. If I could sell trees 6,000 miles away in Israel, imagine what I could do locally!" he said.

He went on to say that he considered it his duty to provide for the younger generation just as others had provided for his generation.

Roger Greenberg said he felt humbled when asked to introduce Thelma Steinman, one of this year's recipients of the community's highest honor, the Gilbert Greenberg Distinguished Service Award.

"Thelma has been actively involved in our community longer than I have been alive," he said.

He added that initially Steinman had been reluctant to accept the award as she was such a modest woman. He then shared an excerpt from the nomination letter, so she would know why the Selection Committee was convinced she was a worthy choice.

The letter read: "This little woman, a Jewish whirling dervish, has and continues to inspire and motivate us by her pioneering spirit, by her actions ... and that smiling 'shaina punam' that makes all of us working with her ... feel great to be involved in our Jewish world."

In her brief remarks, Thelma Steinman stated that "a volunteer's reward is strictly the satisfaction of making a difference to the lives of others."

"Happily," she added, "in this wonderful community of ours, we have a great reservoir of volunteers who work together like one big mishpocha."

She drew appreciative applause when she announced: "I fully intend to continue as always, for I am too young to retire."

The Gilbert Greenberg Distinguished Service Award was also presented to Gerald Berger, who unfortunately was too ill to attend. Past Vaad President Norman Zagerman said that he spoke on behalf of Gerry's many friends when he described the award winner as "a mensch, a warm and caring man who gives honest, sage advice".

Berger's wife Ruth told the audience that she was sorry that her husband couldn't attend to accept his award.

"But there is an upside," she added. "He would have spent the whole time thanking others and would not have mentioned his own contributions, whereas I have no problems bragging about him - shepping nachas."

"He gets things done because he's not concerned with getting the credit."

"Well tonight, this whole beloved community pays tribute to his work, whether he likes it or not," she said.

In updating the community on the progress of the Community Development Commission (CDC), Chair Stephen Greenberg happily reported that "on September 13, less than 100 days from now, the Soloway JCC in the Joseph and Rose Ages Building will open its doors."

"It will be time to say goodbye to 151 Chapel Street with all its cherished memories and move to Broadview and Kerr to begin a new era."

Vaad Executive Director Mitchell Bellman also referred to the new campus and what the community hopes will become "the new centre of Jewish life in Ottawa".

However, he cautioned the community that "we are not simply relocating a lot of agencies and offices to a new site. We are building a campus to serve people of all ages. Our agencies need to redefine themselves as partners in a seamless web of services to help build, strengthen and care for our community."

The assembly paid tribute to Arnie Vered, Marjorie Feldman and Roz Fremeth, outgoing UJA Campaign chair and Women's Division co-chairs, for their outstanding efforts.

Emunah Women tribute to the late Molly Sherman a huge success!

By Ellie Leyman

The Rachel Kizell Chapter of Emunah Women of Ottawa held a memorable tribute to the late Molly Sherman, one of its most devoted members, who passed away a year ago in Israel.

About 120 guests gathered at the Westin Hotel on May 24, Yom Yerushalayim, with family members from Toronto and Montreal. Gladys Zarecki, president of Ottawa's Emunah Women, was the evening's coordinator.

Marlene Briskin, spoke of her late sister's tireless devotion to her family and friends, to Emunah and of her great love of Eretz Yisroel.

Rabbi Reuven Bulka noted that Molly was a true Aishet Chayil. Commemorating Yom Yerushalayim, guest speaker, Rabbi Mordecai Zeit of the Beth Tikvah

Synagogue in Dollard des Ormeaux (Montreal), brought the audience back in time to 'when our grandparents lived in Jerusalem'. He urged everyone to help make Jerusalem a 'light unto the nations'.

Speakers also included Molly Sherman's son Yossi and Roslyn Schneidman, executive vice-president of Emunah Women of Montreal, who discussed the work of Emunah Women in North America and Israel.

The Torah Academy Boys' Choir, led by Rabbi Mordecai Fried, performed a repertoire of Chassidic songs and Montreal's Shalom Duo provided lively Israeli and Chassidic music.

Funds received will go to help the Beit Shemesh Day Care Center and other vital Emunah projects in Israel.

Biographies for young readers feature Jewish achievers

KID LIT

DEANNA SILVERMAN

Biographies are popular for a variety of reasons. Some people look to them for inspiring role models. Others use them to gain insight into a particular profession. Many read biography as an easy way of learning history. While many more seek access to the private, titillating indiscretions of public figures.

For young readers, biographies have an added benefit. Because biographies are about life they help kids understand that everyone faces a variety of big and small problems and that, no matter the odds, individuals can persist, overcome and make a difference.

The biographies described below are part of an ongoing series called JPS Young Biographies. Other books in the series feature such varied individuals as Theodor Herzl, Hank Greenberg, Leonard Bernstein, Yoni Netanyahu, Elie Wiesel and Raoul Wallenberg.

In addition to featuring famous Jewish achievers, there are a few other elements common to the books in this series:

First, they are written as easy-reading narrative chapter books for children aged 9 to 12. Chapters are short and highlight one thread of the life story.

Second, these are introductory biographies, the equivalent of a Reader's Digest Condensed Book for kids. In a relatively straight-forward fashion they interweave the threads of a particular person's life and times.

Third, except for a general description of the person's family background and relations with parents, siblings, spouses and friends little private material is included.

Fourth, each book contains a few black and white photographs of its subject at different ages.

Fifth and most important, each book uncovers and conveys something about the essential humanity of its subject.

Moe Berg

The Spy Behind Home Plate

By Vivian Grey

The Jewish Publication Society 1996

170 pages Ages 9-12

The dichotomy central to the life of Moe Berg (1897-1972) is immediately evident in the subtitle of this biography. On the one hand, Berg defied his father to become one of the few Jewish players in major league baseball. He was in the major leagues from 1923 to 1942. He was dedicated to baseball and delighted in the glory and publicity his exploits produced.

On the other hand, using his popularity as a cover, Berg served as a spy before and during the Second World War. The private Moe Berg, it turns out, was a lifelong gifted learner who graduated from Princeton University with a specialty in linguistics. In the off-season, Berg studied languages at the Sorbonne and later, in an attempt to please his father, earned a law degree from Columbia University Law School.

Berg was a brilliant storyteller, an empathetic listener and an intrepid traveller. He enjoyed the perks of celebrity life yet blended into every culture he worked in, Japanese, Latin American and European.

Moe Berg was also a proud though non-religious Jew, and a loner. Sadly, after his careers in baseball and espionage ended, he could not adjust to changing times and the realities of postwar America.

I recommend Moe Berg's biography for youngsters who love baseball and/or adventure stories.

Teddy Kollek

Builder of Jerusalem

By Abraham Rabinovich

The Jewish Publication Society 1996

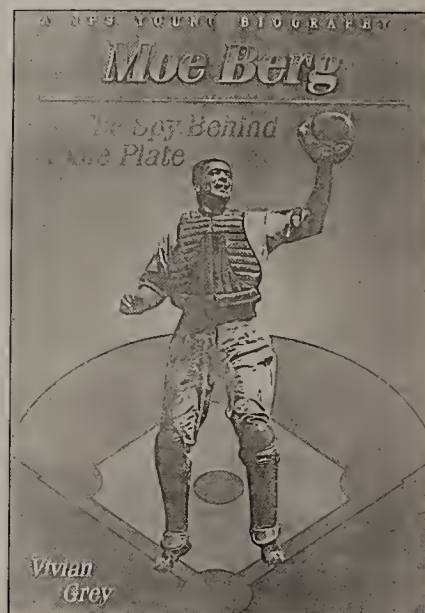

124 pages Ages 9-12

Born in 1911 in a small village in the Austro-Hungarian Empire and raised in post First World War Vienna, Teddy Kollek's story is very much the story of a man dedicated to the ideals and battles of 20th century Zionism and the survival of the Jewish people.

As a young man Teddy emigrated to Palestine, helped found Kibbutz Ein Gev and undertook secret missions to save European Jewry before and during the Second World War. After the war, Teddy was sent to the United States to head an illegal gunrunning operation for the embattled Yishuv in Palestine and the emerging State of Israel.

Eventually Teddy Kollek became the most famous and popular leader of the world's most fought over city. As mayor of Jerusalem from 1960 to 1993 he was instrumental in transforming his city into today's culturally flourishing metropolis.

Teddy Kollek's biography is an exciting jump into 20th century Jewish history. I recommend it for kids who love action, on-the-spot problem solving and learning from experience.

FROM SOUP TO NUTS

Food seems better when cooked on the grill!

SOUP TO NUTS

DONNA KARLIN

This time of year I do as much cooking on the barbecue as I can, including the vegetables and side dishes. Food always seems to taste better when cooked on the grill. Here are three recipes I love to make. They're easy, have a wonderful flavor and since everything is cooked outside, clean-up is a snap!

Grilled Vegetables

- 3 large portabella mushrooms, quartered
- 2 large yellow onions, cut into 1/4" slices
- 2 medium zucchini, cut into 1/4" slices
- 2 large tomatoes, quartered
- 2 heads radicchio, quartered
- 2 large red bell peppers
- 1/2 cup balsamic or red wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- Juice of 2 lemons, 3 tbsp reserved
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tbsp dried oregano
- 1 tsp dried basil
- Salt and ground black pepper to taste

Preheat the grill. Place vegetables in greased grill basket, or on a double thickness of aluminum foil with holes poked in bottom and sides folded over. Combine remaining ingredients, except reserved lemon juice, in small bowl for basting sauce. Place vegetables on grill and baste with sauce. Cover grill. Cook, basting and turning vegetables several times, until vegetables are tender, 10 to 12 minutes, removing vegetables that cook faster from grill. Place vegetables on serving platter; sprinkle with reserved lemon juice and serve. Serves 6.

Grilled Mustard and Pepper-Crusted Steaks

- 1/2 cup dry red wine
- 4 tbsp vegetable oil
- 2 scallions, minced
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup grainy mustard
- 2 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
- 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 tbsp coarsely cracked peppercorns
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- Salt and hot red pepper sauce to taste
- 6 rib steaks

Combine wine, oil, scallions, garlic, 2 tsp of the mustard, the Worcestershire sauce, 1/2 tsp of the peppercorns, oregano and salt in food processor; mix well. Transfer to a glass baking dish and add steaks, turning several times so they are well coated. Cover and refrigerate 4 hours or overnight, turning several times. Preheat grill or barbecue on medium high. Combine remaining mustard and hot pepper sauce in a small dish. Remove steaks from marinade and pat dry. Spread a thin layer of mustard mixture over one side of each steak and add some of the remaining pepper. Place on grill, mustard-side down. Brush remaining mustard over and sprinkle with pepper. Grill turning once, until cooked as desired. Serves 6.

Crunchy Teriyaki Burgers

- 1 1/2 lb extra lean ground beef
- 1/2 cup finely chopped water chestnuts
- 4 green onions, chopped, including green tops
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 tsp packed brown sugar
- 1/8 tsp ground ginger
- 6 buns

Mix ground beef, water chestnuts and green onions, tossing lightly.

Shape into 6 patties about 3/4" thick. Combine soy sauce, orange juice, garlic, brown sugar and ginger in resealable plastic bag or shallow glass dish. Add patties, turning once to coat. Refrigerate at least 3 hours and up to 24 hours.

Heat grill. Remove patties from marinade and cook 10 to 15 minutes, turning once, until juices run clear and cooked as desired. Serves 4-6.

Recipe can easily be doubled or tripled.
